Dear Mr. Consumer:

June 24, 1931

Do you realize that right here on Cape Ann is a firm capable of giving you every conceivable service in home building, modernizing and heating?

The Gloucester Coal and Lumber Company is such a complete service organization. We want you to know us better and for this reason invite you to take advantage of the special offer below.

Here's an idea you'll like! On the enclosed card we have listed the most frequent things that people would like to have done to their homes. If you will simply check the things which interest you most and return it to us, the proper service division of this company will quickly and easily tell you — without obligating you in any way whatsoever — just what the cost of materials and labor on such jobs would be.

You couldn't find a better time to get this information. Prices are low — the season is right — everything is in your favor. Remember — in asking for this information you do not commit yourself to an order of any kind. This is just another Gloucester Coal and Lumber Company service — it may help you see the way to have done things you've been wanting to do for a long time.

Very truly yours,

GLOUCESTER COAL & LUMBER CO.

NEW YORK YACHT CLUB

Through Membership in Eastern Point Organization May Make Gloucester its Base Above Cape Cod—Colonel Prentiss Interested

From its inception The Shore has emphasized the importance of yachting from the practical as well as the patriotic side, meaning that the employment given to boat builders, riggers, sailmakers, and dealers in yachting chandlery generally would be beneficial to the citizens while from the patriotic side the new generation, whose progenitors were bred to the sea, would at least not lose that instinct as far as yachting could make up for the real thing.

Last year in an historical sketch we noted the progress on Cape Ann of organized yachting from its inception to the present. We expressed the hope that the Sandy Bay Club at Rockport might be revived. This has come to pass and there are now three well established yachting centers at strategical centers on Cape Ann which combined make an impressive total. No place as favorably situated for this sport on the Atlantic coast, Gloucester Harbor, Annisquam with its Ipswich Bay course, and Rockport with its unrivalled stretch of water.

Years ago, nearer fifty than forty, the New York Yacht Club sought headquarters somewhere north of Cape Cod. The Astors and Vanderbilts in their schooner yachts made Gloucester Harbor their base for considerable stretches of time and had their eye on the Stage Fort property as a site for the New England base of that club. Tentative proffers for the land were made but it was eventually secured as a memorial park commemorating the first settlement in the Bay colony, the purchase price being $70,000 in 1897 on a forty-year loan.

The New Yorkers never came north of Cape Cod to settle but succeeding generations of the club have never gotten over the idea of the Gloucester base. The harbor is ample, easy of access, affords ideal shelterage, and the general conditions to their liking.

The Eastern Point Yacht Club two years ago purchased the tract on which the Beachcroft Hotel is built for headquarters. Later it was decided to get nearer the water for a club house so the property and house in the Wonson's Field tract, so-called, was also acquired and is now utilized as a club house eventually to be superseded by a somewhat larger building for the purpose.

The Beachcroft property is to be retained and on the expiration of the lease the hotel is to be converted into a private hotel-club house for members. This matter has been discussed by prominent members of Eastern Point who meet daily in business and social contact, members of the New York Club to whom this idea meets with favor.

Membership in the Eastern Point Club will mean when these plans are carried into effect that the owner of a yacht may drop anchor on the finest anchorage ground along the New England coast, come ashore and be landed in an organization to which he belongs, order supplies to be delivered at the club float, and put up at the hotel at which accommodations to his metropolitan liking may be secured.

This, of course, will mean a great increase in business to all those connected in any degree with the yachting interest all down the line. Further, when an international or national fisherman schooner race is scheduled these men, intensely interested, may make a short cut through the canal in their yachts and make headquarters here and in all probability give the game a substantial boost, for these New Yorkers have a great admiration for the genuine deep-sea Gloucester fisherman. And it is within bounds of the probable, if that perennial challenger, Sir Thomas, ever tries for the Queen's cup again, the incomparable fisherman's course off Cape Ann might be designated. Sir Thomas, who has already donated two such fishermen's cups was a spectator at one of these races, and is a great admirer of Gloucester and its fishermen.

Now all this is not the dream which a writer with head in the clouds hopes may come true but is a plan of such men with feet on the ground as Col. John W. Prentiss and associates, firm friends of the city and eager to advance its interests.

A BAS MOSQUITO

War Declared on the Minute Midnight Marauder and Insect Racketeer—Effective Preventive Measures Taken to Evict Him from the Cape

"Despise not the day of small things."

The rat and the mosquito are among the most formidable enemies of mankind. Consider the mosquito. He has altered the destinies of the world nations and saved the United States from being involved in serious complications arising from the Munroe doctrine. Possibly on that account we owe him a certain debt of gratitude.

He caused De Lesseps to abandon his plan of digging a canal across Panama when the job was half completed by disseminating yellow jack among the laborers, mowing them down in winrows. It was not until American scientists found a way to cope successfully with that pest and put him to rout that the job was finished and controlled by Americans.

Well, the mosquito bulks large in the summer resort equation. Practically the first question asked by summer residence seekers is whether the mosquito nuisance is pronounced. Much depends upon the answer.

His favorable habitat to propagate is in wet, marshy and stagnant districts. Therefore the indicated solution is to abolish these breeding places. There were never many of these plague spots on Cape Ann which in the main is a tableland about a hundred feet above sea-level sloping on all sides to the sea. One of the few places where he may find lodgement was in the area of marshland near Good Harbor Beach. But not now.

This spring the state having allocated a certain sum to exterminate the pest along the North Shore, some $30,000 was expended on this work in this district. The marsh land in question was trenched thereby allowing the water to drain seaward and there was nothing left in which the mosquito might propagate. So it has been exit for Mr. Mosquito. His depredations hereabouts, never very pronounced, have been noticeable by their absence this very rainy season.

THE ROAD TO GLOUCESTER TOWN

By Isobel Keil Wurtele

Twin Lights, and the Breakwater,
Pointing to Thatcher's Isle.
And the merry din of the tide, just in,
Dragging its kelp, the while.

On, on, where the bay shelters,
Safely the dories rest.
They are bobbing corks, where the highway forks,
On the calm of the harbor's breast.

Sunset, and the reef lying,
Flat, like a purple fold.
While the battleship, with a rise and dip,
Rides on a sea of gold.

Twin Lights, and the Breakwater,
Out to the open sea.
Oh, the road leads down from Gloucester town,
Straight to the heart of me.

MY TASK

The disagreeable must be faced
And it must be faced by me.
To follow a chosen path of ease
Is more than cowardly.

THE LITTLE THEATRE

On last Friday and Saturday nights the habitués of the Little Theatre were completely transported to the world behind the showrooms of a dressmaking and millinery shop. The realistic impression created by the writers, Aimee and Philip Stuart, was intensified by the acting of the well-qualified cast. This smart, modern comedy-drama, made up entirely of feminine characters took place exclusively in the shop of Mrs. Pembroke, an English lady who had faced all the trials of working up from the bottom, and now was suddenly beginning to notice the futility of it all. Mrs. Pembroke—competent, understanding, sweet, and quietly strong, was done by Roswell Hawley, who created a personality that will not soon be forgotten by those who were present. Never slipping out of character for a moment, she scored a triumph with her enthusiastic audience. Dorothy Coleman, as Miss Roberts, millinery saleswoman, showed an excellence of interpretation and expression that could not have been improved upon, while Linda Collins as Gracie Abbot captivated the audience at once with her naive charm and simplicity. Claire Pembroke, done

That old adage "the eyes are the mirror of the soul," is familiar to every one—but unless you are an expert on make-up, the chances are ten to one that you don't know that the mirror in the eye is the thing that gives it life. In other words, a blind man's eye doesn't reflect your image even if you are looking straight into it. Thus, in order to produce the effect of blindness in an actor's eyes for the stage or screen, the first essential is to kill the reflective qualities in the iris.

That this can be done convincingly is demonstrated in the case of David Manners, who plays the blind hero, John, in Columbia's drama of regeneration, "The Miracle Woman," showing on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday at the North Shore Theatre. Manners' eyes, which normally have a steady twinkle in them, present in this picture the appearance of absolute deadness—this despite the fact that there is no visible defect in them. This effect was by no means easy to produce, and was achieved by Norbert Myles, make-up expert at Columbia, only after several days of concentrated work on experiments.

Myles finally turned the trick by the means of what he terms the "three point reflector"—that

GEN. BENJAMIN F. BUTLER

Summer Resident Who More Than Any Other Person in the City's History Contributed to the Industrial Upbuilding of Cape Ann

Another in the occasional sketches of "Summer Visitors I Have Known," series. J. R. P.

IN THE MIND OF THE WRITER, the man of all men who did more to advance the interest of Cape Ann than any other, was Gen. Benjamin F. Butler. Born in Maine, a graduate of Colby, afterwards studying law and called to the bar, he was among the first to volunteer in the Civil War. His fame in Union uniform was respected in New Orleans. In the North, especially in the cities, much of the journalism was tinctured with pro-southern sympathy, "copperheadism," and Butler was reviled and ridiculed by these papers. However, he won the confidence and esteem of the leading Union generals, Gen. Grant and others, in fact was one of the inner circle of military and political men of the period.

stone villas at Bay View, one occupied by himself, now the home of Gen. Adelbert and Mrs. Ames, the latter born Blanche Butler, daughter of the general.

Then things began to move fast. The sparsely settled northern part of the cape began to hum with industry and soon crowds of skilled stone workers from England, Scotland, Italy, and other places began to pour in. For miles the legal profession was international.

Sand Dunes, Farm Point, Coffin's Beach—One of the historic points of the North Shore. Here Col. Coffin assembled his slaves who worked his plantation August 5, 1775, and with men of the countryside, repelled a landing party from a British Sloop of War.—Across this, Gen. B. F. Butler planned to run a railroad from the Bay View Quarries to Boston, via Essex.

Commissioned as a major general, he was first assigned to duty in the South with headquarters at New Orleans, a seething hotbed of secession.

The sanitary conditions of this French Creole city were vile. Mindful of the welfare of his troops, Butler instituted a rigorous cleaning up of the city. He scrubbed it clean fore and aft. His aggressive tactics made this "Yankee" doubly obnoxious to the inhabitants, manifested by the women by dousing passing Union soldiers with dirty water thrown from upper stories. Gen. Butler gave notice that he considered this an insult to the flag and if continued, offenders would be accorded the same treatment given women of the streets. Persisting, his warning was carried into execution. Thereafter the Returning to Massachusetts in 1867, he foresaw the era of construction which was to follow a country freed of internecine strife with the passing of the vexed question of slavery. Versatile and resourceful, he determined to share in the resultant prosperity. His attention was called to the granite resources of Cape Ann. These had been in operation for more than a century in a very small way. Their possibilities had been barely scratched.

He purchased large tracts of undeveloped quarry land at Bay View, his right hand man being Col. Jonas H. French, who had served on his staff at New Orleans. To Col. French was left the entire development of this proposition.

Gen. Butler resolved to make Gloucester his home. He built the two the air rang with the sharp metallic ring of steel on stone, hundreds of dwellings for the operatives, and large sheds, wharves, a steam railroad from a quarry in the interior to the wharves where a fleet of large stone sloops were being loaded with rough and finished stone and paving, came into being. A boom town almost over night.

Aware that the government as well as commercial interests were to embark on the largest building program the country had seen, Gen. Butler got into the thick of things and secured large contracts for public and private buildings, navy yards and other projects. The execution of these brought into life the activity described in the foregoing paragraph.

The result was that for more than 50 years a tremendous stimulus was given to the granite industry here. Not only the Butler quarries, but others at Rockport were developed as a consequence. Altogether at its height, fully a thousand families, executives, or operatives of these companies derived their livelihood from these shipments of stone. Especially was this true of the shipment of paving, Cape Ann granite being accounted the most durable material for this purpose, solely used for road construction previous to the introduction of tar-asphalted macadam some 20 years ago.

Tremendous single blocks of stone for monuments and similar work were hauled through the streets to the railroad station at Gloucester by six and eight yoke of oxen. The building of a railroad across Squam Point from the quarries to Essex was seriously projected.

Gen. Butler's stay here was short. Immediately on taking up his residence here, he ran for Congress and was elected. Just after the Credit Mobiler scandals, the Republican party was in bad odor. During a campaign for re-election, the general, away on business, considering his re-election secure, was defeated.

A short time after, he removed to Lowell, where his outstanding business instinct had been manifested by the erection of great bunting and textile mills, greatly adding to the prosperity of that section and New England. He continued his connection with politics in the meantime, his reputation as a lawyer increasing, his practice being rewarded with some of the largest fees of the time. His ambition was to be governor, and although fiercely assailed on all sides during a spectacular campaign, he prevailed and was chosen chief executive. Dead, his enemies have not forgiven him. To date the effort to erect a state sponsored memorial to him has been frustrated. Impartial history will accord him his due. His reward will come.

Such, briefly and sketchily, is the connection of Gen. Butler with this city. He virtually brought the granite business on Cape Ann to such a commanding height that it ranked the fisheries a close second in financial importance. As a small lad, the writer recalls him well. The boys of the period were wont to get their pocket money by selling pond lilies gathered at the West Gloucester lily pond, to the passengers at the Old Eastern Railroad station. He always wore a bloom as a boutonniere, in their season, and the writer had the pleasure of pocketing the penny paid for these water flowers on several occasions. He was very near-sighted but never wore glasses. He always stood while waiting for the train and utilized the time by reading the Journal or Advertiser, and occasionally the Post, the "silver-top" Democratic paper which was his staunchest opponent.

Col. French, to whom allusion was made, stayed as director with the granite company until the late nineties, the industry flourishing as in the beginning. He was a type of man one of whom is seen in a generation. Tall, six feet two, well proportioned, of military and autocratic bearing, wearing the black mustache and imperial affected during the period, he combined superb physical appearance with corresponding intellectual qualities. He was a finished and convincing orator frequently heard here. He dominated the Maverick National Bank of Boston. He made some powerful enemies and, in the late nineties, after the death of Gen. Butler, these maneuvered him into a tight corner and secured the closing of the bank. It went into a receivership and afterwards paid a hundred cents on the dollar. The colonel remained here practically the whole of his business life to the end. Strange to say, he was a pronounced Democrat. Had he espoused the opposite political affiliation, he might have gone far in this section in the political world. As Democratic nominee for Congress from this district, he came within a few hundred of an election. I have said he was of autocratic mien, but a closeup acquaintance rather modified this view. He entertained lavishly at his home, one of the show places of the Cape, the grounds of which he threw open to the public. I recall many pleasant social contacts with him and have a memento which brings to mind thoughts of happy days. He was a staunch advocate of all matters pertaining to the material and social welfare of this city, keen to defend any attempt to deface its natural attractions. Gen. Butler and Col. French: A pair of men the like of which we will not see in our span, the greatest benefactors of Cape Ann that have come into its history.

Gen. Benjamin F. Butler was a patriot in war, responding to the defense of his country, quick to defend the right of the humblest soldier. In peace he devoted his great genius to the development of raw New England resources as no other single man of his time, bringing employment, peace and prosperity to thousands of families whom he brought into and amalgamated into the great American commonwealth. Oliver Ames and the Nickersons, of course, threw their energies into the construction of the great trans-continental railroad construction. Their glory belongs to the West.

Gen. Butler's career was the result of what follows all great wars. The World War or Great War, as you will, brought its ten-fold opportunity after its close. Followed the decade of building construction just ended. But no Gen. Butler has taken advantage and marshalled circumstances to another great thrust to the forefront for Cape Ann granite. Col. French has passed on. While other communities have thriven mightily from the sale of its construction material, the Cape Ann quarries have been strangely silent. Today a mere remnant remains of the mighty fabric built after the Civil War. The working population have moved away. The works are silent and tumbling down, and there are no evidences of a revival. No master minds of a succeeding generation have come into the breach.

JULY HAS NEARLY run its span. One more week to August, always a month of activity on the North Shore. Fine weather is promised and the season should go on to the end prosperously.

Among those entertaining on Saturday evening, July 11, at Del Monte's were: C. S. Jopp of Boston with a party of eight; Miss Charlotte Sherburne of Marblehead, party of eight; Mr. and Mrs. George C. Vaughan, Jr., of Hamilton, party of ten; Richard Woodbury of Eastern Point, party of six; Mrs. J. Wardsworth Busk of Magnolia, party of six; H. H. Proctor of Little's Point, Swampscott, party of fourteen; John Strong of Bass Rocks, party of twelve; Mrs. A. D. Paulton and sister, Priscilla Dennett, party of ten; Mrs. S. Browning of Bass Rocks, party of ten; Donald Thompson of Washington and Magnolia, party of twelve; Mrs. J. Harrington Walker of Magnolia, party of five; Mrs. Jacob Loose of Eastern Point, party of ten; Mr. and Mrs. William Harmer of Bass Rocks, party of eight; Ira Brainard of Magnolia, party of five; P. M. Tucker of Eastern Point, party of eight.

Lew Conrad of the N. B. C. Broadcasting Station entertained on Saturday night a party of friends from New York City here at Del Monte's.

At the North Shore Inn recent arrivals include: Alice Tinkham, Mrs. Mary Bradley, Boston; Mrs. L. B. Reibe and daughter, Mrs. E. R. Kidder, Brookline; Mrs. Francis Dewes, Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Allison G. Catheron from Newton Centre, with their daughters, Lorraine and Miriam, spent a delightful week-end at the North Shore Inn recently. The Catherons had with them a guest, Miss Virginia Millar.

At the Oceanside recent arrivals include: H. H. Little, Mrs. Joseph H. Goodspeed, Cora Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. Paul J. Barry, Boston; Mrs. Clement A. Smith, West Newton; Mrs. A. Philip Giles, Auburn; Mrs. Charles H. Ditson, Leone Soresa, Thorne Crane, Mrs. Henry Sanford Mann, Mrs. W. Henry Harrison, E.

Deffner, Robert Henderson, Signe Ogren, Edith L. Allen, New York City; Mr. and Mrs. H. Whitin, Northbridge; Charles Wilson, Evan M. Wilson, Rosemont; H. C. Faill, New Canaan; Mr. and Mrs. Samuel C. Davies, St. Louis.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. John Geary, Jr., of Philadelphia, was recently the scene of the most delightful of birthday parties when Miss Louise Geary with fourteen guests celebrated here, her twelfth birthday.

Mr. and Mrs. Geoffrey Smith and their two children are the guests of their father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Coolidge at Magnolia.

At the Magnolia Beach Club the activity is, with the advent of clear weather, starting off anew. Bathing followed by luncheons on the beach seems to predominate, while tennis and swimming lessons given to the members of the club are going on at full force.

Recent guests at the club include: Jane Gilman of West Newton, guest of Margaret Esson; Roland Richards of St. Louis, guest of O. W. Richardson; Janet Swift of Chestnut Hill, guest of J. J. Phelan; Polly Merrill of Dedham, also guest of J. J. Phelan; Edward Hennessy of Chestnut Hill and Nancy Faxon of East Gloucester, both guests of Harriet Boyd.

Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Atkins entertained in June, at Haskell house, their residence at West Gloucester, Mr. Atkins' mother, Mrs. H. L. Atkins, of Madison, Wis.

Mrs. A. G. Atkins was the hostess at tea Sunday to fifty of her friends of the North Shore.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence C. McEwen, formerly of Seattle, are established in "Stonehame" cottage, Stage Fort Terrace, and are enjoying the beauties of that locality. The youngsters of the family include Lawrence C. J. and Barbara.

The anticipated opening of the Oceanside Theatre was inaugurated Sunday afternoon with a large tea and musicale in the parlor of the Oceanside. The guests enjoyed the delightful program consisting of selections by Miss Harriette Eels, whose beautiful contralto will long be remembered from Stillington Hall nights; Mr. George Cuthright, and Mr. W. Rosing, tenors, and Mr. George Houston, bass baritone, famous for his performance in Faust at Stillington.

Among those present at the tea and musicale were: Mrs. J. H. Lancashire and her daughter, Mrs. Richard Southgate, Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Bradley, Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller and a party of friends who motored down from Rye for the event, Mrs. Stedman Hanks, Mr. Eben Comins, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Butler, Mrs. F. W. Hodges, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Buswell, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Goodrich, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Codman.

The opening performance at the Oceanside Theatre, "Effie Gallows," was postponed from July 20 to July 22, to a full house. Among those present were: Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller, Mrs. Richard Sears, Jr., Mrs. John F. Held, Mrs. John C. Phillips, Mrs. Samuel A. Tucker, Mrs. John L. Saltonstall, Mr. and Mrs. Richard T. Crane, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Durward Grinstead, Mr. and Mrs. Harold G. Coolidge.

At the Oceanside recent arrivals include: Mr. George B. French, Boston; Mr. Louis K. Hyde, Plainfield; Mrs. Harry Brown, Pittsburg; W. L. Wirbelauer, Patterson; Mrs. L. M. Johnson, Miss Katherine Johnson, New York City; Mr. and Mrs. Krewson, E. H. Krewson, Merchantsville; A. Philip Guiles, Auburndale; Mr. and Mrs. W. H. McMillan, New Orleans; Mrs. Joseph A. Smith, Little Rock; Mr. and Mrs. Louis E. Miller, Cincinnati; Mrs. H. H. Lowe, Steubenville; Miss Caroline H. Bovey, Mrs. J. A. Ross, Minneapolis.

The North Shore Inn was the magnet for many new arrivals this past week. Among these were: Mrs. Susan S. Grey, Boston; Mrs. Marshal N. Rice, Miss M. E. Costello, Arlington.

The list of week-end guests include: Mr. Alden Cobe, Boston; Mrs. Martha Mahady, Mrs. R. Finn and daughter, Miss Miriam, Cambridge; Mr. C. F. Colbath and party,

Notice to Water Takers

THE EMERGENCY RESTRICTIONS imposed on the use of water last season on account of scarcity are removed. The usual rules are now in force.

The Water Board is pleased to announce that the Alewife Brook Water Basin, begun last summer, was completed in January and was filled to capacity within two months. While there is ample supply in storage in the four water basins, the Board wishes to caution against needless waste.

The Board takes this opportunity to express its thanks to the summer residents and citizens for their very general response to their request for economy in the use of water. This co-operation materially helped a very serious situation.

Dreher, who made plane connections in New York City on Friday night in order to enjoy the hospitable atmosphere of the Inn for the weekend, with his friend, Mr. Rice and party, also from New York City. Mr. Dreher plans to return to the North Shore Inn in August for a more extended visit.

Among those remaining for an indefinite stay are: Miss Alice Tinkham, Mrs. M. E. Bradley, Hotel Charlesgate, Boston; Miss Marguerite E. Waters, New York City; Mrs. Francis J. Dewes, Chicago, and sister, Mrs. L. B. Leibe, Brookline.

At Hesperus Villa recent arrivals include: Mrs. George M. Cleveland, Boston; Mrs. E. H. Haskell, Miss Marion Haskell, Newton Center; Miss F. J. Foster, Gloucester.

At the Magnolia Beach Club, entertainment this week seems to run mostly to bathing followed by luncheons on the beach.

Miss Polly Richardson entertained on Saturday, six friends at a beach luncheon.

Mrs. B. E. Cole and her family entertained a group of friends recently at another charming beach luncheon.

On the spacious veranda of the club house, six of the friends of Miss Ruth Martin enjoyed a delightful luncheon which she gave on Monday.

The J. J. Martins of Coolidge Point are entertaining at present Mr. and Mrs. William Martin of Brookline with their baby daughter, and Miss Dorothy Robinson of Chicago.

MAGNOLIA BEACH CLUB

The Magnolia Beach Club has been the scene of several indoor luncheons, one of which was recently given by little Miss Renee Schenck who entertained fourteen of her small friends.

Miss Priscilla Phelan was recently hostess to a party of thirteen guests whom she entertained at the club.

Another delightful party, consisting of ten guests, was given recently by Mrs. J. S. Sampson at the club.

At Hesperus Villa: recent arrivals include the Misses MacNeil, Nancy, Janet, and Louise, from Chestnut Hill, and their governess, and Mr. and Mrs. H. R. W. Brown from Brookline.

The Oceanside has as its guest Miss Claire Spencer, well-known playwright, author of the new play "Effie Gallows," the opening production of the Oceanside Theatre Company at the Oceanside Theatre.

Recent arrivals at the Oceanside include: Mrs. C. I. Hood, Miss Wilder, Lowell; Mr. and Mrs. Burnham Lewis and two children, Weston; Mrs. Charles H. Ditson, Mrs. James N. Wells, Delia Linwell, Elsie Crane, Mrs. M. A. Bashford, New York City; Mrs. Edwin Johnson and son, Louis, and her mother, Mrs. Louis Gholstin, Atlanta; Mr. and Mrs. Shirley A. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Earhart, Ann Arbor.

Mr. Shirley A. Smith, who is staying at the Oceanside for the season with his wife, is vice-president of the University of Michigan.

DEL MONTE'S

Among those recently entertaining at Del Monte's were: Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Woods of Hamilton, with a party of eight; Miss Charlotte Sherburne of Marblehead, party of fifteen; Mr. and Mrs. George C. Vaughan, Jr., of Magnolia, party of eight; Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Raphael of Marblehead, party of twelve; Mr. George Dobyne of Beverly Farms, party of ten; Mr. and Mrs. Grafton Smith of Hamilton, party of fourteen; Mr. John Morrill of Manchester, party of eighteen; Mr. William Martin of Coolidge Point, party of twelve; Mr. and Mrs. John Amory, party of eight; Mr. and Mrs. John Kennedy, party of eight; Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Winslow, Jr., of Bass Rocks, party of thirty; E. H. Brainard, Magnolia, party of eight; E. B. Kitfield of Magnolia, party of eight; Mr. Ray Lappan, Marblehead, party of eight; Miss Constance Percival of Marblehead, party of twelve; Miss Margaret Brainard of Magnolia, party of twelve.

An announcement of this kind is sufficient proof of the popularity of this most beautiful casino on the North Shore. Every night draws large numbers of those discriminating in their choice of entertainment to Del Monte's, and on Saturday nights in particular, the softly lighted casino echoes with the sounds of laughter, conversation and music as the many devoted patrons entertain in this delightful way groups of their respective friends.

On Friday night, Del Monte's had as its dinner guests, Mrs. Alvan T. and Miss Lydia Fuller.

TARR—DUMMER

The marriage at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Boylston Dummer of Rockport and Boston of their daughter Dorothy and Reginald Wentworth Tarr, son of Mrs. Jessie Dunshee of Washington, united two colonial families of note, Miss Dummer being a lineal descendant of Gov. William Dummer and of Jeremiah Dummer, a silversmith of colonial note. The groom is a descendant of a colonial governor of New Hampshire. The bride is a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music and Mr. Tarr of Technology and is an engineer. They will make their home in Brooklyn, N. Y.

EAST GLOUCESTER

SUMMER LIFE is at its height at the busy resorts included in the East Gloucester region. The two art exhibits, the many beaches, the popular evening parties, as well as the introduction of the talks and the increasing number of interesting lectures at many of the summer hotels, all combine to attract large numbers to this section of Cape Ann.

At the Hawthorne Inn Casino on Saturday night an enthusiastic audience listened to a fascinating lecture on India given by Louis H. Baker, soldier, forest officer and big game hunter, who has been touring this section of the country for a short time.

On Thursday, Mrs. Harry Elger, who is a guest at the Inn, entertained about sixty of her friends at a delightful dinner party and bridge in the Manse.

Recent arrivals at the Inn include: Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Hughes, Mrs. Beatrice Gardener Montague, William Jardine, Boston; Philip Mansfield, Mrs. E. L. Shaw, Cambridge; Mrs. Frederick B. Holder, Mrs. Arthur W. Spencer and daughter, Brookline; John C. Stewart and daughter, Worcester; Mrs. Heaton Robertson, Miss Kathleen Robertson, A. Heaton Robertson, New Haven; Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Dahl and daughter, Hartford; Mrs. L. D. Greene, Mrs. Annette Natanson, Mrs. S. C. Harriot and son, Samuel S., Jr., Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Wanner, Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Brennen, Miss Margaret E. Field, New York City; Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Angevine and family, Rochester; Mrs. Henry C. Rowe, Westerly; Miss Deborah Turnbull, Wilmington; Mrs. Sophie G. McCormick, Pittsburgh; Mrs. Henry B. Carpenter, Somerville, N. J.; Ellen Kerr, Carlota Kerr, Philadelphia; Marjory Spooner, Maplewood; Mrs. James Grimes, Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Carlson, Newark; Dr. and Mrs. John K. Walker, Media; Judge and Mrs. C. C. McCord, Mrs. Margaret M. Boyle and daughter, Mrs. Harlan Scott, Mrs. W. F. Halsey, Mrs. Moorhead Millor and daughter, Caroline, Washington; Mrs. A. F. Hopper, Toronto; Mrs. Esther F. Bradford and son, Evanston.

At the Delphine recent arrivals include: M. F. Hooper, Boston; Annie C. and Rachel Johnson, Belmont; Kenneth L. Hoyden, Newtonville; Mr. and Mrs. Philip Corell, Louise J. Corell, New York City; M. E. Rumney, Germantown.

Lieutenant-Colonel L. R. James was a guest at the Delphine over last weekend. Mrs. James is spending the season here.

Mr. and Mrs. F. F. Streeter are the guests of their brother, George Streeter, who is spending the season at the Delphine.

At the regular Tuesday night auction and contract bridge party at the Rockaway, the following prizes were awarded: Contract, Mrs. Roy Wonson, first; Dr. William J. McKown, consolation; auction, Mrs. Harriet Blair, first.

BASS ROCKS

LAST MONDAY the regular bridge scheduled for that day at the Bass Rocks Golf Club proved to be the largest so far this season. The arrival of the consistently beautiful weather which came on the same day may have accounted for it. The entertainment at the Club this year is running more to luncheons, teas, and bridges, several of each having occurred during the past week.

At the Thorwald recent arrivals include: Mr. and Mrs. M. Mydens, Boston; Miss Armister, Mrs. Edward Grotzinger and children, Edward and Helen, New York City; Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Leger and daughter, Dorothy, Troy; Emily LeHuray, Summit; Lucy and Mary Norton, Louisville; Mr. and Mrs. Marcella Fortier, Mrs. I. M. Davyie, Mr. and Mrs. G. Davie, Miss Hallowell, Montreal.

At the Moorland: Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Vogt, Cambridge; Helen Weston Coombs, Worcester; Sarah and Alice Hawkins, West Hartford; Ida Auerbach, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph J. Corn, Mr. and Mrs. John Devine, New York City; Frank C. B. Held, Buffalo; Mrs. E. C. McKellor, Binghamton; Anna and Edith M. Brett, Flushing; Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Cook, Fayetteville; Rossele McKinney, Albany; Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Green, Toronto; Mrs. E. J. Ryerson, Jackson; Mrs. Ovid Butler Jameson, Minneapolis; Professor E. G. Frazier, Minneapolis; Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Semple, Montreal; Mrs. C. H. Hollister, Grand Rapids; Elizabeth MacDonald, Grand Rapids; Adelaide Flynn, Streeter B. Flynn, Jr., Oklahoma City; Mrs. C. P. Pickard, Ottawa.

Mrs. Schill from Englewood, New Jersey, who is occupying the Brown Boulder cottage this season at Bass Rocks entertained on Tuesday, July 14, with a charming tea and bridge at the Club.

Another delightful event which took place during the past week was a luncheon bridge given by Mrs. Anderson Case of Syracuse, who is spending the season at the Stoddart cottage on Atlantic road.

Mrs. Frank Nash recently entertained at another luncheon bridge at the Club. Mrs. Nash is also from Syracuse.

A large group of her friends recently enjoyed a charming luncheon bridge given by Mrs. C. H. Wilson at the Club.

Mrs. Boody, who is spending the season at the Hawthorne Inn, entertained at the Club a few of her friends on Friday.

On Tuesday, July 14, the women's tournament occurred followed by a tea at the Club. Mrs. Richardson of New York won the tournament and Mrs. Belvedere Brooks from Montreal, who is a guest at the Moorland came in second.

Continuing its season of activity which began on the Fourth with the club dinner at which over a hundred and thirty guests were present, the Bass Rocks Golf Club is already dated far ahead for luncheons, bridges, and teas. On Monday afternoons, the customary club bridges will be continued throughout the season. On Wednesday, Mrs. Stahl, the wife of the well-known Admiral Stahl from Washington, entertained at a charming luncheon at the club house. Another delightful luncheon, occurring on the same day was given by Miss M. B. Day from Baltimore, who is occupying the Dr. Ayer cottage at Bass Rocks.

Miss Louise Condit from Boston gave on Thursday afternoon a tea for the Garden Club at her summer home at Bass Rocks.

On Saturday afternoon, July 11, Mrs. Frank Nash from Syracuse, entertained a group of friends at her summer home at Bass Rocks with a luncheon and bridge.

Mrs. Victor Kauffman of Washington entertained recently at a luncheon which she gave at the club. At another luncheon here, Mrs. Mason from Syracuse, entertained twelve of her friends.

Among recent arrivals at the Moorland is Mrs. Ovid Butler Jameson of Indianapolis. Mrs. Jameson is the sister of Booth Tarkington.

Alternative bids were opened at the State House, Tuesday for the construction of a $50,000 cement or steel bulkhead to extend two-thirds of a mile.

EASTERN POINT

THE WEEK has been enlivened by the coming of the youthful contestants from Marblehead, Annisquam, Rockport and other centers in the contests for the right to sail for the Sears cup which is scheduled for in the waters of Long Island Sound.

Mrs. S. A. Raymond of the Ramparts is entertaining Mrs. Harold Clark and son, David, of Cleveland.

Mrs. Robert Goheen of Dahguela, India, is also a guest at the Ramparts, and will return to India later in the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Thorpe Nesbitt of Haverford, Penn., Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Laughlin of Sewickley, Pa., and Mrs. William Thayer Brown of Short Hills, N. J., are guests of Mrs. George E. Tenner at her Eastern Point home.

Miss Carol Young of Boston has opened one of the cottages on the Pollard estate and will remain until the close of the season.

The Caroline Sinkler cottage on Eastern Point Boulevard, which has been closed thus far this season during the absence of the owner in Europe, has been taken for the rest of the season by the William Dexters of Marlboro Street, Boston.

The Beachcroft: M. Montgomery, G. F. Spaulding, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Parker, Mrs. R. E. Oressay, Boston; Rose McMahon, Somerville; Anna E. ANNISQUAM

THE CHAND BROTHERS, stage drivers of Annisquam, have always been credited with setting out the willow slips, now the Willows. But now comes claim that Samuel Curtis, road surveyor, some time before the war, was the originator of the job, the idea being to remedy a swampy section in the roadway.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Bucknam of Wellesley Hills are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Winslow L. Webber of Wellesley who have the William M. Jelly house on Norwood's Heights this season.

Mr. and Mrs. Roger W. Babson of Wellesley are passing the season quietly at their cottage at Railcut Hill, which they have sequestered as a bird sanctuary, one of the high hillocks of the Cape.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexis Arapoff have Appletree Lodge on the Hyatt estate at Annisquam. Mr. Arapoff is an artist and finds many subjects to his liking at Annisquam.

Arthur M. Wiggin and family of Brookline have returned to Squam Rock cottage, remaining until after Labor Day.

Another Brookline family returning for the season is that of Sherburne Wiggin, who are occupying Rockholm cottage.

Arthur M. Wiley and family have one of the cottages in the Diamond Cove district.

Mrs. J. Bertram Williams of Cambridge is at Hermitage Ledge cottage.

Here is one to figure out quickly: Dr. A. R. Keith of West Hartford, Conn., has returned to the "Ark," his summer home, for several seasons.

Prof. Charles L. Norton of Boston and family have taken occupancy of their colonial cottage in Leonard street for the season.

William H. Pear and family of Cambridge, long time cottagers here, came in June to their Cambridge Avenue house.

Mrs. W. B. Stearns of Brookline has the Sanford Riley cottage this season.

Rev. Dr. Eugene Rodman Shippen and family, formerly minister of the Second Church in Boston, have arrived at the house in Arlington Street they have occupied for some years.

Trenor Tilley of Holyoke and family have taken occupancy of a cottage in the Rockholm district.

MY LADY GOES SHOPPING

Peggy was shopping. That is to say, Chubby was doing the shopping and Peggy was acting as chief advisor. Chubby had just received word of the unexpected marriage of a favorite cousin, and in order to do justice to the event he had whisked Peggy away to the Grande Maison de Blanc on a shopping tour. The array of beautiful luncheon and dinner sets captivated Peggy. Even Chubby was dazzled by the intricacies of design in the delicate Point de Venice and Flemish lace affairs. There were, besides the luncheon sets, lace tea cloths and matching napkins, banquet cloths, also of Flemish and Point de Venice lace, and a wide variety which were delicately tinted and some lovely informal luncheon sets of gayly colored and embroidered patterns. They finally decided on a twenty-five piece luncheon set of delicate ivory lace, and departed highly pleased with their purchase. They were just leaving the Grande Maison de Blanc when they simultaneously noticed Marcia's car across Lexington avenue.

"You can't escape the members of this Clan, no matter where you go," announced Peggy. "Let's go over to Manahan's. I'll bet she's either there or in Ovington's."

And Peggy turned out to be quite correct. They entered Manahan's just in time to see Marcia, wrapped in a beautiful fall coat with a luxurious collar, parading before the mirror, and Anne with a rapt expression surveying her.

"You're just in time," Marcia exclaimed after surprised greetings had been exchanged. "Phil and I are leaving tomorrow for the mountains for a few days and you can help me select a coat from this marvelous array."

They were delighted with all of them and finally selected a rich tweed mixture with a large sport fur collar. Anne was across the room breathing deep covetous sighs before a gorgeous display of evening wraps. There were all kinds and very smart with their metal brocade richness and fur-trimmed touch of softness. One in particular, of deep crimson chiffon velvet, was especially suited to Anne's dark beauty. It was short, of course, with luxurious Dolman sleeves, and could be made to fit very snugly.

"Say, are there any men around here?" Chubby, uncomfortable and disinterested, wanted to know.

"Poor Chub," laughed Marcia. "Phil and Jimmie and Gay went over to Ovington's to do some table-buying, wasn't it, Anne?"

"Right," said Anne. "Let's all go over, I'd like to have a look at those tables Gay has been raving about, myself."

They found at Ovington's a much disturbed three-some, the two men trying to out-argue the indignant Gay.

"Oh, defend me!" entreated Gay of the new-comers. "I claim that these green iron based, glass topped nests of tables are by far the most practical and best for our porch. Those two bullies—" pointing at the laughing Phil and Jimmie.

"Now Gay," interrupted Phil, "you know that both Jimmie and I admit the beauty and worth of those tables, but we can both just picture that tiled top table being a great success on your porch. Look, Chubby, can't you? Just the right height for bridge or backgammon and with those bright squares of orange and black, just big enough to use and small enough not to be in the way."

"I give up," sighed Gay. "You certainly missed your vocation, Phil—"

She was interrupted by a little squeal of delight from Marcia across the store. "Look at this one!" she cried. "So tiny and beautiful, solid mahogany inlaid with satin wood, and look, Phil, at this other one. It looks just like a beautiful Japanese tray, but you just press these levers on the ends and, bing! the legs drop down and you have a table!"

"Oh," groaned Phil, "whose idea was it to come in here? I can see that I won't be going home empty-handed."

Which was quite true, and Gay was given her way by the taking of both tables, and every one enthusiastically accepted Chubby's plan that they return to Gloucester and play some miniature golf before lunch.

"At the New East Gloucester Miniature Golf Course," said Gay, "otherwise I refuse. I'm bad enough anyhow and get so mad. At least over there you can't find any fault with the course and there's plenty to interest you when you get too disgusted with your own playing to feel like enjoying much of anything."

"It sure is cute," enthused Marcia. "I could just sit down and look at it, so attractive."

"I remember last week over there," said Gay, "but, by the way, where's Bud? I meant to ask you before."

Marcia looked at Phil. Phil looked at Gay and tried to be nonchalant in his answer. "I don't know what's the matter. She wouldn't come."

Later on the way back to town from the East Gloucester Miniature Golf Course, Phil and Marcia confided to Anne that they didn't know what had happened to Bud. "She just hasn't been the same at all since the accident," said Phil.

"She's worried about Jack's illness, that's all," furnished Anne. "If you weren't blind, you'd see yourself that she's crazy about him."

"It's not that, Anne, I know," said Marcia a little wearily. "I wish I could explain why it's not, but I can't."

From this, Anne tactfully turned the subject to Jack's serious illness, starting on the night of the accident.

"Shaken nerves, that's all," announced Phil. "It was a tough strain. He'll be all right any time now."

"Don't forget to stop at Trowbridge's for that prescription for him," said Marcia.

"But," persisted Anne, "how about that night a week ago when Bud went running after him and we all waited an hour for her to come back, and finally the rest of us went home?"

"Oh," said Phil, "she just thought he was sick and went down to help him. She came back later and Marcia and I went down and found him unconscious. His nerves had just snapped I guess."

Arriving at Gloucester, concentration on the tempting menus at Towle's ended all further conversation.

"You order for me," said Jimmie. "I have to run over to the Cape Ann National. Just get me one of those rare special luncheons."

"Order that ice while you're out, at the Cape Pond Ice Company," reminded Gay.

"Hey!" called Phil, "wait a minute. Marcia, what did you say the name of those shirts was at Earle O. Phillips' Smart Shop? Those Irish poplins?"

"Burton's," replied Marcia. "And get some ties there, too, Phil."

"How about buying something to take home to Bud?" suggested Peggy, as they were leaving Towle's. "How about some of Towle's home-made candy? Mmm, I'd like some myself."

"Funny," remarked Phil, "I thought of getting her something while I was out, and dropped in Blanchard's." He drew out of his pocket a little sport silver link bracelet with a diamond shaped smooth monogrammed clasp. Every one was highly enthusiastic and Peggy immediately began to wonder if Bud would mind if she bought one like it.

"I have to go up to Brown's and get a radio," announced Anne. "Is there anything I can get for any one while I'm there?"

"I'll go with you," offered Chubby. "I'd like to look over their supply this summer. I bought mine there last year, and it's as good as new. They have four makes: Radiola, Atwater Kent, Majestic and Victor."

"That store!" enthused Gay. "Is there anything they don't carry?"

"How about all meeting afterwards at Barker's?" suggested Peggy, trying hard to look innocent.

"O. K., Peggy," laughed Chubby. "You saved me suggesting it that time."

So the Clan temporarily disbanded again, Peggy leaving for Armstrong's to buy some new sport oxfords and stockings; Phil and Marcia for the Cape Ann National Bank; Jimmie and Gay, enthralled by Peggy's redecorated living room, departed for Steele & Abbott's and the North Shore Furniture Company to make arrangements

The old master, Frederick C. Poole, with children of Mr. and Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw-McKean —Margarett, Jenny, Shaw and Harry (twins).

There passed on last fall a man probably as widely known to the many thousands who have visited Cape Ann in the past 30 years as any other on Cape Ann, Frederick C. Poole, who had attained the ripe milestone of 81 years.

Mr. Poole was born in Switzerland but came to New York with his parents before he learned to talk. He was apprenticed to the cabinet maker's trade but became something more than a workman. The same spirit and genius that animated Heppelwhite, Chippendale, Phyffe, and others to formulate artistic creations in household furniture which have won for them immortality was also his inspiration.

To his art he gave enthusiastically all that was in him. Every article that came from the hand of this master craftsman was the output of love and painstaking care. Coming to this city in his prime, his ability and talent were recognized. His restorations and originations were eagerly sought and in a short time he built up a business employing the most proficient craftsmen of the kind to be found. His handiwork may be seen in the homes of the wealthy and cultured in every state of the country and Canada, valued above money considerations.

He was an ardent baseball "fan." As a boy he was at the birth of baseball in this country, crossing the ferry to Hoboken to watch the first games in the Elysian fields (how appropriate to lovers of the game), admission being free in that pre-commercialized sports era. He was a constant attendant at the big games in Boston and when age prevented these journeys, the radio filled in for him much of what he formerly visualized. It was while listening to one of these air-strewn descriptions of a league game that the end came peacefully in an arm chair. They found him a little later with a smile on his face. He had passed on to that Elysian field where the Great Umpire gives his judgment unerringly. A ripe, rich life, rounded and happily completed. He loved children and our picture of him is with a group of the little ones of one of his clients, Mr. and Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw McKean.

His work lives on in the establishment under the auspices of his daughter and son, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Keffer, in whom is the spirit that animated the founder of the house.

BONNIE PRINCE BEATS TAJA AT EASTERN POINT

One of the closest races in all classes for quite a time was sailed at Eastern Point, Wednesday afternoon, July 15. A fine breeze from south southwest, shifting a bit to southwest, prevailed.

The course was to be windward, leeward, but the variation in wind made a close reach instead of a beat. The summary:

TAJA AND TERN WIN EASTERN POINT RACES

A brisk southerly breeze with a sharp jump to the sea gave the Eastern Point yachtsmen smart sailing conditions Saturday afternoon. The first leg was a beat followed by two reaches. In the R's the Taja and Bonnie Prince sailed an even windward race, Taja rounding 20 seconds to the good. On the reaches Taja stretched out the margin of water steadily.

TWO AT EASTERN POINT

Two races were sailed at Eastern Point Sunday that of the morning being a resail of the July 8th race in the Sonders and Triangle classes. A moderate 8-knot breeze from the southwest backing to the southward prevailed in the morning. In the Sonders the Demon, which made her first appearance Saturday in two years, held the lead to the mark, Skeezix, Tern, and Hevella coming close on.

In the triangles Scalene from Squam was sent over ahead of the signal and was handicapped two minutes in rectifying her mistake. Black Bess led both on windward and leeward work to the finish.

The afternoon race was sailed in a moderate southwesterly, Sonders and Triangles comprising the entrants. The triangular course was indicated, a beat to the southward, a spinnaker reach to the western mark and a reach home. As in the morning Demon took the bit in her teeth at the start. The flotilla split into two divisions to windward but Tern which had gone to the westward worked into first place in the middle of the leg turning 1½ minutes ahead of Tid IV and maintaining her advantage on the run and reach to the finish. The Quail in the Triangles kept up her good work of the past two weeks and finished more than two minutes over Cursor, second boat. She had the lead throughout. The summary:

SCALENE, NISAN AND MALOLO WIN RACES

A brisk southwesterly breeze, approaching 18-knot force, which kicked up a sharp chop in the bay, gave the heavy-weather boats a chance at Annisquam Saturday. Incidentally, it developed weak spots in the gear and rigging, as three boats were towed in as breakdowns.

Henry Worcester, with Scalene, added another tally to his wins in the Triangle class.

In the 15-foot class, Commodore Wiggan was euchred out of the race by Dan Woodbury in the Nisan when within a stone's throw of the line. The commodore had led all over the course, with Nisan following, and established a comfortable three-quarters of a minute lead, when coming into the river, Nisan stood in, under the bar, while Tabasco was held under the Squam shore. On the next tack Nisan crossed the commodore's bow near Marsh's Rock and in two more short tacks got the gun.

John White and Ben Smith had a nip-and tuck fight in the Cats, while Mary Bradley, daughter of Prof. and Mrs. Charles H. Bradley, proved herself a thorough-going heavy-weather sailor by beating Squam-born Harry Griffin for first place by three seconds. The summary:

SCALENE WINS AGAIN

Another fine steady southwest breeze favored the yachts at Squam Sunday afternoon with a fairly smooth sea. Harry Worcester won in the triangles in the Scalene. This gave him five wins out of seven starts so far.

A fine setto took place in the Cat class between John White of Wakefield and Ben Smith, two keen young ones, the former winning in Kittiwake. The summary:

MAIDEE AND ECLIPSE VICTORS AT SANDY BAY

While the Eastern Point and Squam had a hill and dale sea Saturday afternoon, Sandy Bay sailed over a comparatively smooth floor, being under the lee of the Gloucester hills which break the force of a southerly. There was a good capful of wind, however. Cooney piloted the Maidee to victory over a three-cornered course twice repeated, a run to Straitsmouth, a reach to Andrews' Point and a beat to the starting point.

Eclipse won in the Star Class by 42 seconds.

LEAHY—WOODBURY

An early summer wedding of interest to the summer colony of this locality occurred Saturday evening when Miss Charlotte Woodbury, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Woodbury of Littleton, became the bride of William Edward Leahy of Littleton. Rev. Benjamin B. Hersey of the Annisquam Universalist Church, performed the ceremony which occurred at the family home, 14 Leonard street.

The bride wore her mother's wedding dress, point d'esprit trimmed with mechlin over taffeta and carried swansonia and pink roses. The maid of honor was her sister, Evelyn, who was gowned in green lace and chiffon and carried talisman roses.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. The best man was Paul Caswell Woodbury, brother of the bride. Some 200 attended the reception that followed.

After a motor trip in Canada they will reside in Littleton. The bride is known as one of the skillful women yachtsmen of the North Shore and the Annisquam Yacht Club.

MRS. MOODY AT MANCHESTER

At the invitation women's tennis tournament at the Essex County Club, Manchester, Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, most noted of women players, played two matches Tuesday, defeating Mrs. Ary J. Lamme, Jr., of New York in the forenoon and Miss Charlotte Miller, the New York girl who played for the University of California last spring, in the afternoon. The uncrowned champion just went along as she pleased, and evidently has been experimenting with her game, as she defeated Mrs. Lamme, 6—1, 6—3.

Against Miss Miller she met another hard hitter, like Miss Margaret Blake, who is especially strong with her backhand. This match gave the gallery much pleasure as she tried to measure strokes with Helen. Mrs. Moody won 6—2, 6—2, but her service still needs improvement. She made double faults putting the ball in play in both of her matches, and in several other shots Mrs. Moody did not have the success for which she aimed. The weather was hot and the conditions were not suited for her, but she is so much better than any one else in the tournament there is small chance of her being beaten.

Miss Sarah Palfrey of Longwood also had to play two matches, her first against Mrs. B. E. Cole, 2d, of Andover. Miss Palfrey's victory was marked by brilliancy and dazzling strokes. This, Mrs. Cole admitted. In the afternoon Miss Palfrey faced Mrs. John A. Van Ryn, formerly Miss Marjorie Gladman, who was runner up to Miss Morrill last year. The same style of play that Miss Palfrey exhibited in the morning was continued throughout the first set, which she won 6—3.

It was the first meeting of the pair, and the fact Mrs. Van Ryn is one place ahead of the Longwood player in the national ranking added interest to the play. Miss Palfrey took a lead in the second set, and four times she was within a point of cleaning up the contest in straight set with a win of 6—4, only to lapse in her play.

She lacked the anticipation of the first set, and contributed errors. The set became a long drawn out affair, with the lead changing at several stages. Finally Mrs. Van Ryn won, 10—8, to even up the contest.

The third set saw another measuring of strokes. Miss Palfrey won the first two games, but it was not long before she again fell into making errors, and the set was prolonged to 14 games, which the Longwood player finally won 8—6.

What probably was the feature match of the day was played in the forenoon when Miss Marjorie Morrill of the home club and Miss Dorothy Andrus of Stamford, Conn., winner of the Longwood singles event last Saturday, took exactly one hour and 40 minutes to finish.

The summary of the day's events:

SINGLES—THIRD ROUND

Miss Sarah Palfrey, Brookline, beat Mrs. Benjamin E. Cole, 2d, North Andover, —2, 6—2; Mrs. Frederic S. Moody, Jr., San Francisco, beat Mrs. Ary J. Lamme, Rye, N. Y., 6—1, 6—3.

FOURTH ROUND

Mrs. Lawrence A. Harper, Santa Barbara, Calif., beat Mrs. J. Dallas Corbiere, Southboro, 6—3, 6—2; Miss Mary Greef, Kansas City, beat Miss Cecilia Riegel, Philadelphia, 6—3, 6—4; Miss Marjorie Morrill, Dedham, beat Miss Dorothy Andrus, Stamford, Conn., 6—3, 13—11; Miss Sarah Palfrey beat Mrs.

THE ZONING ORDINANCES!!

CITY OF GLOUCESTER

Notice is hereby given that the Zoning Ordinances of the City of Gloucester have been printed in their entirety and are now ready for distribution at the office of the City Clerk, Allen F. Grant, City Hall. Copies will be mailed on application.

In a general way, all the summer resort areas have been made residential sections only. Six types of districts have been designated, namely: 1, single residence districts; 2, general residence districts; 3, apartment house districts; 4, business districts; 5, light industrial districts; 6, heavy industrial districts.

The ordinances specify in detail the requirements, restrictions, area, regulations, yards and courts, non-conforming uses, district boundaries, accessory uses, automobile services, methods of procedure to obtain building permits, changes, variations, appeals, etc. They are of especial interest to summer resident realty owners.

ALLEN F. GRANT, City Clerk.

Gloucester, July 1, 1931.

ROLAND HOLT

It is with regret that The Shore received news of the death last week of Roland Holt, a contributor to its dramatic columns for several years. His calls at the office were always a source of pleasure and his contributions of value. For some years he was a summer resident at East Gloucester. His death occurred at New Canaan, Conn. He was 63. His wife, Constance D'Arcy Mackay, survives and three sisters, Mrs. Rufus G. Mather of Baltimore, Mrs. Joseph Bloodgood of Baltimore, and Miss Sylvia Holt of New York.

A son of the late Henry Holt of Henry Holt & Co., publishers, he had been associated with the firm since 1890, and was its vice-president for twenty-one years, from 1903 to 1924. He was a member of the class of 1890 at Yale, when he was dramatic critic of the New Haven Palladium. He made five trips to Europe to study the theaters there, and lectured on theatrical subjects in New York, Boston, Washington, Chicago, New Orleans, London.

He had been a director of the Century Opera Company and of the New York Drama League.

JEROME H. REMICK DEAD

Jerome H. Remick, 62, for many years head of a music publishing house that bore his name, and prominent in Detroit affairs for many years, died there July 15 following a prolonged illness. His wife and three children survive. In the 20's the Remicks had a summer home at Bass Rocks and later in Magnolia.

about having some work done on their own home.

Later at Barker's the Clan was indulging in peach ice-cream sodas. "Let's go to the movies," suggested Anne. "There's a rare show at the North Shore."

"As always," added Chubby. "I'd like to, who else?"

Marcia hesitated, "I'd love to go—but I hate to leave Bud home alone, and I don't think she would go," she regretted.

"I thought she said something about going to Rockport to buy a coolie coat like Anne's," Phil remarked.

"At the Beach Plum and Bayberry Candle Shop?" asked Anne.

"Yes," Marcia replied. "But she might change her mind. I think if you don't mind, I'd better go home."

After Marcia and Phil had gone, the Clan buzzed over their sodas.

"I don't understand," said Chubby. "Bud's been acting very queerly. On Friday I took her on an inspection tour of L. B. Nauss and the Gorton Sea-Food concern, and she didn't seem to want to go at all. When we were there, she was delighted and apparently awfully glad she had come, and seemed to be her own natural enthusiastic self again. It is a thrill to watch the operations at both places, but as soon as we left she was quiet again. It beats me. I can't figure it out. I hate mysteries," he finished, rebelliously.

"She's acted strange ever since the night of the near-drowning, ever since Jack has been sick," said Anne.

"I wish I knew how she knew Jack before," puzzled Gay.

"Well," said Jimmie, "if we're going to the North Shore—"

"Meaning that it's none of our business," laughed Gay, "and it is late. Let's go."

Meanwhile Marcia and Phil had arrived home.

"I wonder where she is," said Marcia, a worried note creeping into her voice.

"She's all right," Phil, with a poor attempt at being convincing, ran up the steps. "Bud!" he called.

There was a muffled sound from upstairs, and Marcia rushed up to find a sleepy-looking Bud curled up in bed.

"Why, you lazy thing!" she exclaimed, pretending not to notice the tear-stained eyes.

"It's such a comfortable bed," sighed Bud. "Ah could sleep foh evah heah. Whea evah did you-all get such a one?"

"Pattilo's of course," replied Marcia. "The entire bedroom set came from there. I love walnut. The mattress is a Simmons."

"It's lovely," murmured Bud. "Ever'-thing is lovely heah."

Bud's blue eyes filled. Marcia suddenly felt ridiculously like crying, too. "This is very silly," she announced, and when Phil came upstairs he found his wife and sister clinging to each other and being very moist around the eyes. He stopped at the door. "Well, I suppose you know, Marcia?"

Marcia nodded. "You dear foolish little girl," she said. "As though it would make any difference to any of us."

Bud smiled, and soon they were all laughing and gay again.

"Let's have some tea," suggested Phil. "That's a good cure for the weeps." And soon the tea-kettle was boiling merrily on the faithful Glenwood range recently installed by the Gloucester Gas Light Company.

"Well, what's happened around here since we've been gone?" Marcia wanted to know, as they were all comfortably seated on the smart newly painted furniture that Phil had bought from the Gloucester Coal and Lumber Company.

"Well, Swinson Brothers were over to fix up your tennis court like they did Chubby's," said Bud. "They fascinate me they work so fast. It's practically finished now."

"Gee, they do look perfect," shouted Phil from the window. "I can see that I'll be getting pretty dependent on them soon. Last week they fertilized and fixed up our lawn and it looks like a new place already."

"Oh, and L. E. Smith called up to say that they'd deliver your Maytag tomorrow."

"That's good," said Marcia. "I meant to go in and see them today, what a saving. They're so reliable, I had no idea they'd be so quick about it."

"And the Cape Ann Laundry called, too," added Bud.

"Oh, yes," said Marcia. "About that rug, I suppose. I thought sure it was ruined, and I wanted to know if they could clean it."

"They can," furnished Bud. "Ah nevah saw such an establishment. They can clean anything from towels to upholstery."

"I know it. You remember when Chubby spilled the ice-cream last week on that beautiful chair, Phil? They got it all out. There's the chair over there, Bud. You'd never know anything had happened to it."

Bud surveyed a beautiful chair upholstered in gorgeously rich chintz.

"Isn't that the upholstery material you bought at Poole's Antique Shop in Magnolia?" Bud asked.

"Yes, you remember the day we looked at all those beautiful samples they have over there this season, and the curtain materials, too?"

"It's beautiful. Some men have been working over at Peggy's all afternoon.

What's she havin' done?" Bud asked, curiously.

"Hagstrom is remaking the entire garden and putting in a new driveway, I understand. They're the same company that is fixing the new reservoir we looked at the other day. They do wonderful work," announced Phil.

"Say Phil, you forgot to see L. E. Andrews about having the plumbing looked over," cried Marcia, suddenly. "Oh dear! Well, they'll come tomorrow. They're so dependable," she said to Bud. "It's such a relief after some of the firms you run up against. We're having them install a silent oil burner, too, very soon as protection against the cool summer and early fall mornings."

That night the Clan were all assembled with the exception of Jack in Marcia's front living room.

"How about some coffee and chicken sandwiches?" suggested Phil.

"You can't tempt us," laughed Anne. "Although I know that the coffee is delicious fresh Kybo from the First National Stores and the chicken the best in town, we have recently indulged in a delicious light lunch at Wetherell's."

"How about a swim first to freshen up your appetites?" Much to every one's surprise, it was Bud who was suggesting it. Bud, who had not been near the water since that fateful Wednesday. But the Clan was happy to notice that Bud was apparently quite herself again tonight, even more so if anything. Marcia alone was divided in her opinion. It seemed to her that Bud's wit and gayety was just a bit forced. Beneath the delicately shaded lights recently installed by the Gloucester Electric Company, Marcia surveyed the bright little group. To an outsider they looked normal enough, but Marcia felt an indistinct shudder of apprehension, an instinctive feeling of impending catastrophe, and dreaded to leave the peaceful well-lighted room for the wildness of ocean and beach at night.

"There's not even a moon," she objected.

"Oh pooh! Marcia, don't be a kill-joy," and so she joined them on the beach.

Suddenly she observed that Bud had gone back to the house. Unnoticed, she, too, slipped away, and running up the steps, she called her name to Bud and was answered by complete silence.

Rushing up the stairs for the second time that day, she felt a peculiar clutching at her heart as she burst into Bud's vacant room.

The closet door was open, clothing wildly disarranged, bureau drawers open and empty, and in the mirror a little note.

Like Bud, Marcia thought, and stood quite motionless for a moment, before rushing down to call the others.

THE CONSTITUTION ARRIVES

Thursday afternoon the historic frigate Constitution arrived and anchored in the outer harbor. She was received with a salute of guns and Mayor Parker and a delegation of citizens boarded her and extended their compliments.

Friday, it was open ship and thousands took opportunity to visit her. Last evening, Mayor Parker gave a banquet at the Tavern to the officers and the crew were entertained by a dance.

She will leave for Marblehead next

Wednesday night. The intervening time will be one round of entertainment, illuminations and fireworks.

is, the use of highlights, placed with geometrical precision at certain points around the eye. The three principal ones—the ones that cause the light to converge—are placed one in each corner of the eye, and one in the exact center of the lower lid. These white dots, translated into little shafts of light by the powerful Kliegs, meet and react on the iris of the eye killing its reflective quality. The result is that the eye, though actually perfect, is rendered utterly dead looking.

"The Miracle Woman" is the latest starring vehicle for the glamorous Barbara Stanwyck. In addition to David Manners, who is the masculine lead, the cast includes Sam Hardy, Beryl Mercer, Russell Hopton, Aileen Carlyle and Harry Todd. Frank Capra, responsible for such directorial achievements as "Rain or Shine," "Ladies of Leisure" and "Dirigible," handled this production.

"The Man in Possession," previewed at the Criterion in Santa Monica, Cal., receiving a good reception from an audience that apparently found the performance by Robert Montgomery to its liking, will be shown here Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Spicy dialogue is accompanied by swift tempo under the direction of Sam Wood.

The locale is London, where Montgomery returns to his family after serving a term in prison for selling property which did not belong to him. His father and brother (C. Aubrey Smith and Reginald Owen) try to persuade him to go to a foreign land, but Montgomery prefers to stay in England and gets a job as a sheriff's man. His first duties make him "man in possession" at the home of Irene Purcell, poor but beautiful, whom Owen loves. Owen does not know of Montgomery's duties. When Montgomery's family comes to dine, Miss Purcell drafts him to enact the butler role. His family does not acknowledge his identity, nor does he. This provides a situation for comedy, including slapstick.

Montgomery has found himself in love with Miss Purcell and declares himself after his family has departed. She reciprocates to a degree. Alan Mowbray, a former suitor, phones and Montgomery tells him that she is out. In the morning Owen comes to the house and Montgomery advises him that Miss Purcell is not wealthy. This is after Owen has paid Montgomery a thousand pounds to leave the country. Then Montgomery informs Miss Purcell of his identity, and the two leave England with the money Owen has given him.

All the principals except Montgomery speak with a very pronounced English accent. Why not Montgomery also? members of the audience asked.

Maude Eburne and Forrester Harvey add comedy touches to the picture.

Every male member of the supporting cast of "A Holy Terror," the Fox picture featuring George O'Brien and Sally Eilers, at the North Shore Theatre, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, with the exception of Stanley Fields, who was a headliner in vaudeville, has been a leading man on Broadway.

The youngest is Humphrey Bogart, who starred in David Belasco's New York success, "It's a Wise Child," while the others are James Kirkwood, Robert Warwick, Richard Tucker and Earl Pingree.

Irving Cummings, who directed the picture, was, likewise, a leading man in New York before he became prominent in motion pictures in which he played roles before he took up the megaphone.

Rita La Roy, who enacts an important role in "A Holy Terror," was a leading woman on the stage, but Sally Eilers, appearing in the leading feminine role had neither stage nor picture experience when she launched her screen career in "The Goodbye Kiss."

O'Brien is the only other member of the cast who has never been on the stage.

"A Holy Terror," based on Max Brand's thrilling outdoor story, "Trailin'," has a very exciting and dramatic surprise climax.

sympathetically and with finish by Honora Bruere, and Mrs. Abbott, done by Elizabeth Prime with equal skill, were well worthy of mention. Jane Bancroft as Brigit Penarth, daughter of a lord and an apprentice for the fun of it, showed ability and sympathy, Margaret Reimer as Carry, head packer, showed talent in portrayal of character parts, and the part of Violet called forth many a laugh and relief from the tenser moments of the play, in the hands of the skillful Harriette Weiler. The mannequin parts were well done by Deborah Hall, Polly Sayward, and Betty Childly, who made a great deal of comparatively minor parts.

Altogether the play was a great success. The scenic devices were excellent and very realistic, the gowns were exquisite, and the cast well chosen and capable. Madam Evans and Miss Cunningham are to be congratulated on this third successful production, and wished equal success in their three-act play scheduled for next week, "Milestones," by Arnold Bennett and Edward Knoblock.

SINFONIETTA AND SAN ROMA AT NORTH SHORE ARTISTS' ASSOCIATION

One of the musical attractions of the season will be the concert by the Boston Sinfonietta orchestra, Arthur Fiedler, conductor, with Jesus San Roma piano virtuoso as soloist. This promises to be an event, as this will be the only appearance of this famous organization in this section this summer. The date is Saturday evening, August 1 at the rooms of the association in East Gloucester square at 8 o'clock. San Roma will play a concerto by Weber by special arrangement. Already there has been a large advance sale of tickets.

Friday afternoon, July 24, there will be a tea at the rooms of the association to which all sum-

MYRTICE A. WINS

A light southwesterly prevailed at Sandy Bay Sunday afternoon, the triangular course repeated being sailed. In the Sandy Bay class Gifford Beal held the Maidee in the lead until the concluding leg, a beat. Then, Myrtice A, the runner-up, split tacks and headed to starboard off shore wind hunting. She found what she wanted and scored the win with a minute and a half to spare. Eclipse in the Star class was never seriously challenged. The summary:
